

plok light

Hi, this is Jan's Tumble blog.

travel, till, podcast, open source, office, nosql, london, holiday, fun, erlang vm error, databases, coworking, couchio, couchdb training, couchdb, chaosradio express, canoeing, benchmarking, amsterdam, afermath

Great Expectations

3 months ago

My friend Till works on an open source project and has to deal with crap like this: Hey Sean C. Sheridan, [copied dev@lists.roundcube.net for transparency] I'm not sure -- is it thanks, or no thanks? :-) RoundCube is on 0.2.2 currently. That is a 0 before the dot -- far from a 1.0 -- so please connect the pointers to judge the completeness of t...

Caveats of Evaluating Databases

4 months ago

This is part two in a small series about measuring software performance. There's a lot of common sense covered, but I feel it necessary to shed some light. If you haven't, check out part one. Say you want to find out what's behind the buzz of all these new #nosql databases. There's a large number to choose from today. All options come in varyin...

Hello From Amsterdam

4 months ago

After a successful CouchDB training at the ETC London offices, I headed over to Amsterdam for the Dutch PHP Conference. I'm currently in a meeting with Canonical folks to talk about collaborating CouchDB on Ubuntu desktops. Pretty cool stuff. I keep you posted!

Been Looking for an Office

4 months ago

The coworking place is looking for a new location and we looked at three potential offices that were all pretty cool in their own right but all not exactly what we'd be looking for. The quest continues!